DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-48 are allowed. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: As noted in the file history (including, but not limited to page 20 of the amendment) the present invention includes, among others, the feature wherein, when a content data file is copied to a destination file, a value held by the life counter of the content data file being copied is reduced by one half and the reduced value is copied to a life counter of the destination file. As a result, the total sum of the life counters of the original data content file and the destination file is the same as the original life counter value. The prior art did not disclose or suggest the particular features of the claims.

Conclusion
